Message from the Minister

Human Resource Secretariat
Executive Council
East Block, Confederation Building

September 30, 2014

As Minister of Finance and President of Treasury Board, and Minister responsible for the Human Resource Secretariat (HRS), I am pleased to present the accompanying annual performance report. The report outlines the 2013-14 accomplishments, as well as the progress made toward realizing the broad goals it had set for the 2011-14 planning cycle.

The start of 2013-14 was significant as it marked the transition of all HR entities into the HRS. This enabled the initiation of a number of projects and activities to support the enhancement of human resource services within the core public service.

Activities for 2011-2014 included significant progress on the HR Management and Job Evaluation Systems, as well as updates and ongoing delivery of priority human resources (HR) information resources, programs and services to its clients. For 2013-14, significant consultation and research were key activities to help inform a new service delivery model for HR management across the core public service.

The accomplishments of the 2011-2014 Business Plan and especially the outputs of 2013-2014 have helped inform and drive the development of the HRS Business Plan 2014-2017 whose focus will be on the transformation of the HRS in order to ensure the provision of excellence in human resource management in the core public service.

As the Minister responsible for this entity, and thus accountable for the results contained within this report, I am very proud of the many accomplishments of this new HR organization, as well as the innovation I see as it transforms HR program and service delivery for government employees and departments.

I would like to thank all of the employees for their commitment, professionalism and dedication, and I congratulate them on their successes over the 2011-2014 planning period.
Sincerely,

Ross Wiseman
Minister of Finance, President of Treasury Board, and Minister Responsible for the Human Resource Secretariat
Introduction

2013-14 has been a significant year in terms of performance reporting under the Transparency and Accountability Act. It is the first year that the Human Resource Secretariat (HRS) will be reporting as government’s HR management entity, with the completion of the integration of all HR management functions on April 1st, 2013. It also marks the initiation of a transformation process that will eventually result in a new service model for the delivery of HR programs and services in the core public service.

In addition to this significant change management process, the HRS will also be reporting on the 2011-2014 goals and 2013-14 objectives established for each of the Secretariat’s strategic issues in the 2011-2014 Business Plan.

This report contains three sections:

Section I: A descriptive profile of the Secretariat, its shared commitments, as well as highlights and accomplishments for the 2013-14 reporting period.

Section II: A detailed report and comparative discussion of the Secretariat’s performance indicators.

Section III: A description of future opportunities and challenges, and the financial statements for the 2013-14 fiscal year.

The appendices contain further details on the Secretariat’s mandate, key business statistics, and brief descriptions of each of the divisions.
SECTION I

Overview of the Human Resource Secretariat

The Human Resource Secretariat (HRS) is an organization within the core public service dedicated to providing excellent human resource management services and supports to the following client groups:

- Cabinet and its associated Treasury Board Committee.
- Executives, managers, and employees of provincial government departments and central agencies.
- Other public entities.
- Applicants and potential employees.
- General public.

Additionally, the HRS works, interacts, and/or partners with public sector unions, employee associations, other public sector organizations, as well as its provincial, territorial and federal government counterparts across Canada.

The HRS also has responsibility for building government’s capacity for service delivery in French and for coordinating government support for the development of the province’s Francophone community.

A more detailed description of the mandate of the HRS is included in the Mandate section of the report’s Appendices.

Vision

Exceptional People. Exceptional Public Service.

Mission

By March 31, 2017, the Human Resource Secretariat will have supported the enhancement of the human resource capacity of the core public service to deliver exceptional programs and services.

Lines of Business

The HRS is responsible for governance of human resource management within the core public service. To achieve this obligation, the HRS ensures that the HR function is structured, organized and managed appropriately and effectively. Formulating and implementing sound HR policies, programs, procedures and practices; developing a vision for the HR function; ensuring legislative compliance; aligning people management practices with government’s overall strategy; and providing excellent services and supports to its clients are priority governance accountabilities for the HRS.

The HRS carries out its governance responsibilities and mandate through three lines of business:
- Leadership in human resources.
- Direction and support to government departments and central agencies.
- Professional guidance and advice to the employer.

In addition to these main lines of business, the HRS is responsible for leading the delivery of services in French within government and for coordinating government support for the development of the province’s Francophone community through a federal/provincial cooperation agreement. This is accomplished through the Office of French Services, under the direction of the Minister Responsible for Francophone Affairs.

A detailed description of the roles and responsibilities of each HRS division is provided in Appendix C: Divisional Descriptions.

Employee Profile
In 2013-14, the HRS had a staff complement of about 235\(^1\), distributed between three branches, and 21 divisions, as outlined in the HRS organizational chart. As of March 31, 2014, the staff complement was comprised of 182 females and 53 males. Females accounted for 77 per cent of the total HRS workforce. The average age of the HRS employee is 45, 44 for females and 47 for males.

Budget and Staffing
As of April 1st, 2013, the Secretariat operated with an annual budget of approximately $23 million.

While the majority of staff is located in the St. John’s region, the HRS provides a number of its services in various centres across the province. For example, learning and development supports are available in Corner Brook, and payroll and benefits processing services for all government employees are available in Whitbourne, Grand Falls-Windsor, Clarenville and Deer Lake.

A detailed breakdown of revenues and expenditures can be found in the Financial Statements section of this report.

2013-14 Activities and Accomplishments

2013-14 was a very active year for the Secretariat. Regular activities continued while work proceeded on the development of a new HR service model. Progress was made on the Job Evaluation System, the Human Resource Management System, as well as new policies, programs, strategies, and guidelines to support HR management across the core public service.

The following Shared Commitments section highlights the work carried out by the HRS in cooperation with a number of provincial government entities as well as provincial, federal and territorial counterparts to promote and foster partnership and collaboration in a number of service delivery areas.

The Divisional Highlights and Accomplishments section presents the work of each HRS division and how it supported, operationally and strategically, human resource management in the provincial public service.

Key Business Statistics and Divisional Descriptions are included in the relevant sections of the Appendices of this report.

Shared Commitments

The Human Resource Secretariat worked closely with a number of other government entities and stakeholders throughout 2013-14 to address the following shared commitments:

Job Evaluation System. The Classification and Compensation Division lead the development and implementation of a new Job Evaluation System that operates on a point factor system and addresses four standard job evaluation criteria recognized in all equity legislation: skill, effort, responsibility and working conditions. This was done in collaboration with external consultants and public sector unions.

Human Resource Management System Stabilization Committee. The Compensation and Benefits Division has been working with the Office of the Chief Information Officer to implement streamlined business processes, and consulting with other jurisdictions that use the PeopleSoft technology to ensure effective utilization of the HR Management System.
Cooperation Agreements
The HRS assumes both a management and liaison role as it relates to cooperation agreements by facilitating and fostering cooperation and the sharing of information and resources with other jurisdictions (federal, provincial and territorial) and provincial government entities in support of minority community growth and development in the province, including the following:

- The Cooperation and Exchange Agreement between the Government of Québec and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador with respect to Francophonie. In 2013-14, the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador, through the Department of Innovation, Business and Rural Development, and the Government of Québec each contributed $3,000 towards the Festival Jeunesse de l’Acadie held in Mainland on the Port-au-Port Peninsula. 117 youth from Atlantic Canada (including 41 from Newfoundland and Labrador), Quebec and Maine participated in leadership, and arts and culture development training sessions.

- The Canada/Newfoundland and Labrador Agreement on French-Language Services. This agreement with the federal Department of Canadian Heritage was renewed for the period 2013/14-2017/18, and is valued at $3,740,322. Its goal is to support the planning and delivery of French-language services by the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador to the province’s Francophone community, and to contribute to the development and vitality of this community. A new action plan has been developed and will guide the activities of the Office of French Services for those 5 years.

- The Canada-Newfoundland and Labrador Labour Market Development Agreement (LMDA), the Labour Market Agreement (LMA), and the Labour Market Agreement for Persons with Disabilities (LMAPD). One of the components of these agreements is to support the provision of a number of provincial government employment placement opportunities for persons with disabilities. It is managed by the Office of Employment for Persons with Disabilities in cooperation with the Department of Advanced Education and Skills.

Intergovernmental Partnerships. Collaboration on the following intergovernmental initiatives supports government’s involvement in the Ministerial Conference on the Canadian Francophonie:

A study and analysis of various government strategies and practices in the area of Early Childhood Development (ECD) across the country, with a focus on recognizing the importance of government support for ECD programs in French.

Communities of Practice. Participation in national and regional working groups on issues related to employee engagement, HR metrics and compensation. Currently, these groups include the Employee Engagement Inter-jurisdictional Initiative, the Inter-jurisdictional Measures and Metrics Working Group, and the Atlantic Benchmarking Committee.

Enhancement of Student Employment Experiences. Partnership with provincial government departments to ensure placements are valuable for both the student (work experience) and the employer (operations/skills).

Departmental Collaboration. Provision of liaison services between provincial government departments and Francophone community groups in order to support community development goals. This service would normally include translation of related documents and information. Supported activities in 2013-14 included:

SECTION II

Report on Performance 2011-12 to 2013-14

Newfoundland and Labrador’s core public service performs an important function by providing essential programs and services to all citizens to the province. Government recognizes that the interaction between employees and their work environment can have a significant impact on organizational productivity and most importantly, service quality.

Research from the Conference Board of Canada indicates that Newfoundland and Labrador and three other Canadian provinces will be growing at a faster rate than the Canadian average. In Newfoundland and Labrador’s case, growth is tied mostly to the oil and gas industry, specifically large scale energy projects and increased oil extraction. And, like the rest of the Canadian provinces, the province continues to experience demographic and labour market change, i.e. the pressures of an aging population and its impacts on healthcare and healthcare spending.

What this means is that there will be greater expectations on government to support, provide, and deliver programs and services to the public. For instance, enhanced, improved and appropriate service delivery will be essential; and new program and service areas will require innovative thinking and actions by all government departments. At the same time, departments must continue to manage change with large-scale strategies in the face of continued fiscal restraint.

To support the human resource needs of the employees and departments of the core public service, the HRS has been charged with the enhancement of strategic human resource (HR) management in the provincial public service by improving business processes, simplifying access to HR services for employees, and providing consistency in human resource service delivery across government.

Between 2011 and 2014, significant change occurred to support key components of the 2011-2014 Business Plan, as follows:

- Human Resource Information - Supporting effective HR Planning and Decision-making.
- Public Service Capacity - Ensuring the current public sector workforce is positioned for success.
- Public Service Competitiveness - Positioning Government as an Employer of Choice.
- Public Service Work Environment - Fostering an environment conducive to employee well-being and job satisfaction.
The first step was achieved in 2012-2013 as a result of the merging of a number of entities that provide HR services within government, and their respective employees, into a single point of contact for HR service delivery, the Human Resource Secretariat.

Subsequently, a transformation process was initiated to obtain a clear picture of the roles and functions of the various branches and divisions of the HRS, and identify the HR services and program areas that will be essential to effective human resource management across government.

Over the course of the upcoming 2014-17 planning cycle, the HRS will continue to transform HR management within the core public service, in support of its mission, as follows:

By March 31, 2017, the Human Resource Secretariat will have supported the enhancement of the human resource capacity of the core public service to deliver exceptional programs and services.

The focus of the plan will be to draw upon the strengths of existing human resource programs and services in order to enhance the quality and consistency of HR service to clients, develop coordinated and efficient business processes, and ensure clients can easily access HR programs and services.

Strategic Issues

In 2011, the former Provincial Government Programs Office initiated a review of the effectiveness of government’s HR model and the delivery of programs and services. The review identified a number of issues related to having a single point of accountability for HR management, consistent application of HR policy, and one point of contact for any particular service or inquiry.

This review prompted a change in HR structure in government and resulted in the centralization of HR management into the newly created Human Resource Secretariat (HRS) as a way to enhance these areas, but also to improve business processes and to simplify access to HR services for employees.

The creation of the HRS in 2011 was a means to initiate the change needed to ensure that departments could access accurate, consistent and timely information in order to make HR management decisions; and that employees could access information to make decisions around personal HR issues.

The main focus for ISSUE 1 has been on the implementation of the Human Resource Management System (HRMS) and the progress toward client access to and use of the system to support human resource management activities.

Goal
By March 31, 2014, the Human Resource Secretariat will have enhanced its ability to provide access to consistent, relevant and timely information.

Measure 1
Provision of access to consistent, relevant and timely information has been enhanced.

Indicators:
- Access to, and use of, human resource planning information and tools has been supported.
- Development and implementation of components of the Human Resource Management System have been supported.
In the 2011-2014 planning cycle, the HRS was successful in supporting access to, and use of, human resource planning information and tools. The following points provide details on how the HRS supported departments and other client groups in accessing and using HR planning information and tools to effectively manage human resources in the core public service:

- As of April 1, 2013, all HR entities transitioned to the HRS. With one entity (HRS) having responsibility for HR management, there has been improvement to employee and departmental access to, and consistent use of, HR information and tools.

- As part of the Strategic Planning process for departments, Workforce Plans were developed for 2011-14 planning cycle, and work continues on those plans. The HRS provided guidance in the form of meetings and supporting documentation, as well as departmental data to support the development of the plans.

- A number of documents, guides, and training have been developed and implemented to support Treasury Board approved HR policies in the following theme areas:
  - healthy workplace
  - occupational health and safety
  - leave management
  - benefits.

- The HRS has provided HR support and assistance in the departmental organizational restructuring activities.

- It has also provided support and assistance to departments in preparation and implementation of 2013-14 budget decisions affecting position restructuring.

- Strategic Human Resource Management Divisions (SHRM) have conducted analysis and implemented solutions to support the Employee Relations and Disability Management functions; and designed and implemented solutions to enhance employee engagement and support effective and efficient workplace performance.

- SHRM Divisions are continually developing and disseminating guidance, procedural and process documents, making presentations, conducting research and working closely with departments to ensure consistency of information and application, based on departmental requirements and needs.

In the 2011-2014 planning cycle, the HRS was successful in supporting the development and implementation of components of the Human Resource Management System (HMRS). This began in 2011-2012, when a project team was established to begin planning the roll-out of the multi-phased project that would result in the final HRMS. For the initial planning stage, the project team worked closely with stakeholders and consultants to finalize design requirements of the system. Highlights of the planning and implementation are outlined below:

- In 2012-13, Phase I of the project was implemented, resulting in the transfer of government’s manual systems and processes for tracking and managing compensation, benefits, leave management and other HR systems into one information technology system.

- In November 2012, legacy civil service compensation, benefits, leave management and HR systems were successfully replaced, and the first pay cheques were issued under the new system in December 2012. At the same time, reports necessary to support payroll were developed and implemented. As well, reporting requirements, including budget monitoring, staffing compliance, HR information and reports were rolled out to users.

- In June 2013, the Pensions and Refund Payrolls transitioned to the HRMS from the previous legacy system.

- To support future additions to the HRMS, preliminary work has begun on advanced HR modules (e.g. organizational charts, self-service leave approvals and management reporting), including a needs assessment and identification of system requirements. And, a project has been initiated to introduce online pay stubs which is the first step in introducing HRMS Self Service access.

- An HRMS blueprint has also been initiated that aims to address the capacity of the system and how it can be utilized to its full potential in the future.
2013-14 Objective: Report on Performance

Objective
By March 31, 2014, the Human Resource Secretariat will have supported development of the new Human Resource Management System (HRMS).

Measure
Development of the new Human Resource Management System (HRMS) has been supported.

maintenance and requirements, as well as to provide ongoing technical supports for each module has commenced. This team, comprised of staff from the HRS and the Office of the Chief Information Officer, is involved in system updating (e.g., tax updates and PeopleTools upgrades) and manages post-implementation support requests from clients on a priority basis.

- Three positions have been created to support civil pension and teachers’ payroll requirements. As of March 31st, 2014, two additional positions were in the active recruitment process.

Exploration and research has begun around the development of a long-term strategy to implement and capitalize on the effectiveness of HRMS.

- Exploration and research activities have begun and include:
  - The development of a project plan for the Teachers’ Payroll System, by the HRMS project team, to support implementation and long-term priorities of the system, and to focus on effectiveness.
  - Ongoing Engagement /collaboration with stakeholders, communications, knowledge transfer, as well as training and development.
  - The development of an HRMS blueprint has been initiated that aims to address the capacity of the system and how it can be utilized to its full potential in the future.
  - An HRMS Stabilization Committee has been working with the OCIO to implement streamlined business processes that effectively utilize the system, and discuss issues that arise and how to support system requirements.

Discussion of Overall Performance
Over the reporting period, the HRS has made progress toward ensuring that employees and departments have access to consistent, effective and informed information. This has mainly been accomplished through the work being carried out on the Human Resource Management System.

In 2013-14, the Pensioners’ Payroll System was transitioned to the new HRMS, and work began on the introduction of online pay stubs, as a first step to self-service access to employment-specific information.
This self-service access will be further enhanced through ongoing work on a number of system features. For example, the development of a number of advanced HR features of the HRMS has been initiated, including work on organizational charts, self-service leave approvals and management reporting.

In addition to the work that commenced on Advanced HR Modules, the HRMS project focused on preparing for the implementation of the Teacher’s Payroll System in 2014. Significant work has been done in design and implementation planning, including testing, as well as business readiness, change management, and staff training.

These activities continue to be monitored by a production support group, made up of a dedicated staff of three employees who are responsible to monitor and maintain the system, support system updates, and manage client support requests on a priority basis.

The ever-evolving needs of the organization, individual employee expectations, the competitive labour market, and a population that is continuing to age and seek retirement provides an opportunity for government to adopt innovative approaches to managing human resources, in the most effective and efficient means possible.

Planning for change provides an opportunity to develop appropriate human resource programs, services and policies to support departments and agencies with human resource management. The HRS has played a key role in bringing forward best practices in human resource management and to supporting its implementation across the core public service.

Over the course of the planning cycle, a number of issues were of high priority for departments. These issues also impacted the work of the HRS:

- Core mandate review was taking place across government. The HRS assisted in the review of core mandate proposals from departments.
- The HRS was supporting employees through an intense bumping process as well as assisting those who were leaving the organization. This also meant that there was a much smaller public service that was still expected to provide the same level of service to their clients.
- Departments were also faced with various challenges including the infrastructure needed to support oil and gas and other mining activities; lack of staff due to lay-offs; competition with the private sector and even other public bodies to recruit for “hard-to-fill” positions; current budgets, and in some cases, reduced budgets due to new budget processes (e.g. balanced budget); retirements of seasoned employees; and budget constraints on departmental spending to support employee professional development or departmental work that required leaving the province for training or conferences. The HRS assisted departments with addressing some of these issues. For example, targeted recruitment supports were offered to assist with filling “hard-to-fill” positions; training was provided to employees to help prepare them for retirement; and training was offered locally to support departmental and individual learning priorities when out-of-province travel was not possible due to fiscal restraint.
Goal
By March 31, 2014, the Human Resource Secretariat will have enhanced the delivery of HR programs and services.

Measure
Delivery of HR programs and services has been enhanced.

Indicators:
- A plan to support excellence in HR program delivery has been developed.
- HR policies, programs and services have been updated and developed.
- Regular monitoring of the work environment has been conducted and findings have been communicated to departments.
- The integration of HR functions into the HRS has been supported.

In the 2011-2014 planning cycle, the HRS was successful in developing a plan to support excellence in HR program delivery. This has been possible due to the development of a four-phased action plan to transform HR service delivery in the core public service. The following provides detail on how the HRS worked to support this indicator:

- The current transition, transformation and restructuring of human resource management has been, and will be, key in supporting excellence in HR program and service delivery across the core public service.
- To support these activities, the HRS implemented a number of change-related initiatives including information sessions, interviews, divisional consultations, focus groups, surveys, and an organizational change working group to collect data, share information and present opportunities for critical feedback.
- A number of learning and development products have been developed using both internal and external resources to support excellence in HR service delivery including succession management, service excellence, and public service management. Additional products are under development.
- The new HRS Business Plan 2014-2017 was developed to focus solely on the transformation of HR management and excellence in HR service delivery. This Plan will guide the activities of the HRS over the next three years in those two areas.
In the 2011-2014 planning cycle, the HRS was successful in developing and updating HR policies, programs and services. There has been significant review and update of Treasury Board approved policies to support departmental decision-making in the area of human resources.

- Since 2011, 56 human resources and compensation-related policies have been developed, reviewed and/or updated, in the following theme areas:
  - Position Management
  - Benefits
  - Compensation
  - Working hours
  - Employee conduct
  - Healthy workplace
  - Occupational health and safety
  - Travel
  - Uniforms
  - Equipment and resource usage

- PSAccess is a learning management system that provides online learning and development programs and services to support employee professional development. 2013-2014 saw the addition of a number of new learning products and resources to the system.

In the 2011-2014 planning cycle, the HRS was successful in conducting regular monitoring of the work environment and communicating findings to departments. Government has administered four Work Environment Surveys since 2007. As government continues to monitor the work environment, departments will be able to use the results of multiple years to further support decision-making, policy development, and planning in the area of human resource management by helping them identify issues that require further research or action in their own work environments.

- The 2011 Work Environment Survey (WES) was government’s third work environment survey. It was developed and administered by mail to all employees in the core public service (government departments). More than 3,500 employees responded, representing 44 per cent of the workforce.

- To further explore several WES topics, 11 focus groups representing a broad cross-section of job classifications, were conducted and were focused on personal experiences related to communication and trust, workload and work-life balance, health and safety, strategic planning and supervision.

- Departmental results of the 2011 WES were communicated to executives. A corporate report of results was developed and communicated to staff.
The 2012 Work Environment Survey was developed and administered as a means to gauge employee well-being and job satisfaction.

In the 2011-2014 planning cycle, the HRS was successful in supporting the integration of HR functions into one human resource entity. A number of activities were initiated to support HRS transition activities, as follows:

- To support HRS transition activities, a Client Needs Study was developed as a tool to explore issues and perspectives that define the relationship between the HRS and its clients. Results of the study have helped inform the development of a new HR service model.
- In November 2012, staff of the Strategic Staffing Division, Public Service Commission, were officially transitioned to the HRS.
- To support the successful transition of all employees and entities, an amendment to the Public Service Collective Bargaining Act was passed in the House of Assembly that allowed the transitioning of bargaining unit employees to maintain union status.
- As of April 1, 2013, all HR entities and divisions across the core public service were transitioned over to the HRS.

2013-14 Objective: Report on Performance

Objective

By March 31, 2014, the Human Resource Secretariat will have enhanced service excellence in human resource management and planning within the core public service.

Customer service.
- Process flow and metrics have been analyzed to determine an HR Delivery System.
- A cross-Canadian jurisdictional review was conducted to determine how HR services are structured.
- A Client Needs Study was conducted over the course of several months. The primary goals of the study were to explore the relevance of a potential service quality model, delineate client needs and expectations and identify critical service gaps that should be addressed. A number of thematic areas were identified and discussed, and the results provided sufficient evidence to contribute to the development of the new HRS model.
- To support HRS Transformation and inform the development of a service delivery model, a number of focus groups and surveys were conducted to examine the work and values of the organization.

| Employee and client consultation to identify areas for enhancement is ongoing. | The Client Needs Study, indicated above, included in-depth interviews with 74 HRS clients and 68 HRS employees. In these survey/interviews, HRS employees were asked a series of questions about their work, the role of the HRS, their perceptions of the quality of work, what works well or not so well, and suggestions for improvement. Those clients who would be receiving HR supports and services (e.g. employees, managers, supervisors, government executive) were asked similar questions. The responses were quite valuable in helping to determine some areas of focus for the HRS (e.g. areas for improvement, further research and development, streamlining of services, gaps in service areas, accuracy and consistency of information).
- The personal interview component of a Change Readiness Study was conducted to assess the cognitive, affective and behavioural indicators of how employees respond to anticipated, yet unknown, changes in the workplace. The results from the interview, and the upcoming survey component developed in cooperation with the NL Statistics Agency, will | help support change management practices in the HRS before, during, and after the changes are implemented.

- To support the HRS Transformation and inform the development of a service delivery model, a number of focus groups and surveys were conducted to examine the work and values of the organization.

- Several information sessions were also provided to support communication and engagement among HRS employees.

- As part of the HRS Transformation, employees are encouraged to provide continuous, open and honest input to the executive and senior management team on change-related activities in a number of ways. Examples included a suggestions box, personal emails to directors or executive, or a specialized email address that was created for this purpose.

In the area of Pensions & Group Insurance, the following initiatives have been implemented:
  • A management engineer has been reviewing work process to reduce timelines on hand-offs.
  • A telephone work flow system has been approved for implementation, with an anticipated Fall installation, to address client calls/inquiries within the context of limited human resources.
  • Website resources have been updated to improve user accessibility.

• The review of existing HR processes has taken place in preparation for Advanced HR requirements of the HRMS.
• A committee has been established to explore productivity improvement options in the area of attendance management.
• Process reviews have been conducted to foster improvements in the Compensation and Benefits, Pensions and Group Insurance Administration Divisions. Improvements have been noted in these service areas.
• Course evaluations have been emphasized and conducted at the end of training sessions to help assess training needs and revise curriculum content.
• To support continuous quality improvement, regular monitoring and evaluation of internal processes and service delivery methods related to staffing and recruitment has taken place. Communities of practice, stakeholder feedback, and jurisdictional research on best practices have lead to changes in job advertisements, reference checks, training for Selection Board Chairs, applicant screening, and information-sharing practices.

- Regular evaluation-related activities and processes have been incorporated into the operational lines of business of strategic human resource management in government. For example, workforce requirements and learning needs are assessed prior to developing appropriate initiatives that address client needs. HR data and metrics are also used to review HR service delivery.

- A number of existing processes, policies and technology were examined with the goal of establishing resources (e.g. policies, procedures, management tools, implementation strategy) that support effective attendance management and improve worker productivity.

- Business processes for a number of HR functions were mapped and implemented to support departmental needs in the Social Sector.

Discussion of Overall Performance

The transition of all HR functions into one entity meant a great deal of movement of staff, services, and resources. The HRS initiated a number of committees that were responsible for reviewing all HR service areas and how they have been provided. The purpose was to determine any required change, make recommendations to support the change, and implement the change where possible. This also required significant research, consultation with stakeholders, and program and service improvement / development / implementation.

The HRS conducted various client/employee feedback survey / interviews. HRS employees were asked a series of questions about their work, the role of the HRS, their perceptions of the quality of work, what works well or not so well, and suggestions for improvement, etc. Clients who would be receiving HR supports and services (e.g. employees, managers, supervisors, government executive) were asked similar questions. The responses were used to inform the work of the committees and the change in HR program and service delivery that was necessary to support service excellence in the core public service.

This is a significant change management exercise that also brings with it other challenges. For instance, changes were required to legislation in order to allow the movement of some functions and employees into the HRS. As well, communication is more challenging in an organization that grew from 70 employees to approximately 235. It is important to keep everyone informed of the change taking place, as well as to obtain their input into these change processes. A challenge also arises with bringing so many new people together to foster a cohesive team/department. To support this, a Communications and Business Process Committee has been established to identify and improve interdivisional business and communication processes that affect service delivery.

In addition to the change management process, there was (and still is) other work taking place in the HRS, including:

- Collective bargaining was underway with 23 union groups. The HRS represents government in this work.
- The Human Resource Management System was developed to support HR and payroll requirements by modernizing work-flow processes and centralizing HR information. Portions of this project are still ongoing.
- Job Evaluation System – much work and collaboration with unions and external consultants was required to support the approval and implementation of a new job evaluation system that will have the ability to evaluate positions based on a number of factors. Work on the implementation of the new system is ongoing.

While all this work was underway, each HRS entity was required to maintain the highest service standards to all clients.

The next phase of the strategic direction involves an intense transformation/change management process that has become the focal point of the new 2014-17 HRS Business Plan.
SECTION III

Opportunities and Challenges Ahead

As part of its ongoing transformation process, the HRS will be focusing on in-depth research and analysis, and exploration of potential HR models to support excellence in service delivery. The choice of the model will help determine the structure of the new organization, the various functional areas, and the needs of the organization as well as the client, while focusing on innovation and quality improvement.

To support this process, the Secretariat anticipates the following challenges and opportunities in the upcoming business cycle, 2014-2017.

Human Resource Management System (HRMS)

The Human Resource Management System (HRMS) is an information technology system that supports human resources and payroll requirements for the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador and will ensure the integrity of critical information management systems.

Thus far, work has focused on stabilization and ongoing identification of additional system learning and adaptation to meet the needs of the organization. Upcoming work will include the development and implementation of the additions that have been identified, as well as the ongoing examination and update of business processes to ensure effective use and alignment with technology and excellence in service quality to clients and client groups.

HRMS provides government with an opportunity to replace the dated payroll systems that are difficult to support, enhance HR management capacity, support the automation of manual processes, and improve work-flow processes and information for decision-making. Ultimately, the system will support strategic and organizational planning, program evaluation, budget and financial planning, and more effective HR management.

The project is complex and challenges include organization / employee resistance to change; business readiness; complexity of the governance, the shared service and support model; interdependencies of HRMS modules and customization requirements; and the identification of appropriate/adequate resources to support the system following implementation.
Service Excellence

It is clear that the merging of human resource functions into a new central agency will help effectively manage HR issues, and focus needed energies on service excellence. Within government, service excellence refers to the holistic approach taken by the HRS to ensure that it has the understanding, capacity and focus to meet and exceed the needs of its diverse client groups. The HRS will play a key role in bringing forward best practices in HRM and to supporting their implementation across the core public service.

Such an approach requires collaboration, support, as well as ongoing research and planning. Potential outcomes will include appropriate human resource programs, services and policies to support departments and agencies as they manage their human resources.

The following are considered opportunities and challenges for government:

- New and innovative means to conduct recruitment and retain staff.
- Comprehensive and cost-effective means to manage and administer pension and group insurance across the core public service
- Development and support of leading-edge employee HR policies and programs
- Competitive salary and benefits packages
- Healthy and safe work environments
- Continuous training and development to public service employees, using new and innovative technologies and related to a broad range of service areas
